Sustainability at Ruth's Sunshine School

Ruth's Sunshine School is Happy Village International's first undertaking. It is a learning centre for children with disabilities in Volta, Ghana, and has three components: a school, a boarding house and an organic farm. The entire facility will run on renewable energy, including solar panels and compostable toilets. Children will obtain an education and vocational training with the intention of reintegrating back into their communities.

Rainwater collection, passive irrigation, biogas sanitation digestion and passive ventilation are just a few of the techniques that will be used to generate electricity on-site and harvest enough food for residents and staff.

This year, we are working towards raising $75,000 to build the first phase of Ruth's Sunshine School (the organic farm). Children will have the opportunity to live and learn with their community. Help us make this project a success!
